What is Assisted Reproductive Technologies (ART)?

These are medical procedures that use increasingly sophisticated and successful advanced technologies to achieve a pregnancy through in vitro fertilization (IVF) and the transfer of embryos. This may involve third-party reproduction. Collectively these procedures are known as ART.

What is Third-party Reproduction?

This is a process that includes the use of any of the following: donor sperm, donor eggs, donor embryos, traditional surrogates, and gestational surrogates.

What is Gestational Surrogacy?

A gestational carrier or surrogate carries a child conceived through in vitro fertilization using the egg (ovum) of the intended mother or of an egg donor, and the sperm of the intended father or of a sperm donor.

How long does it take to be matched with a surrogate?

This usually will take a number of months. As the demand in the US grows, the matching times does as well. The time will depend in part upon what is important to you in a match. Keep in mind we do not match any surrogate until they are fully prescreened, including medical clearance from their OB and full psychological evaluation — both critical to have completed prior to any match.

When is the right time to contact an ART attorney?

Before you start any medical or fertility treatments. You want to be fully informed about the process and clear about all legal aspects, including any required decision-making prior to egg retrieval, sperm donation, embryo formation, or to signing any documents.

How do we get started with the process?

Please call Meryl at 301-217-0074, or visit www.ARTparenting.com where you can submit an inquiry form. We can provide you with information, or make arrangements for a free initial consultation.

Can we use a sperm donor, an egg donor, or both in a gestational surrogacy?

Yes. In some cases, the sperm and/or egg of the intended parents are utilized. In other cases, a sperm donor or an egg donor or both, or even an embryo donor, is utilized.

Can we use our own egg or a sperm donor?

Yes. Your IVF center will screen the donor, and you will still need to have an egg-donor or sperm-donor agreement in place prior to the donation.

Can we use our own surrogate and still work with you?

Yes. ARTparenting will prepare the necessary legal agreements. We can also assist the parties throughout the process, including with the necessary paperwork or court order for recognition of parental rights and the birth certificate before or after the birth.
